- The first session of the 33rd Legislature ended on May 17th with a special session called by the Governor because the House did not concur with the Senate's version of the budget. Fortunately, leadership from both the Senate and the House worked through differences and the 10 hour special session ended with a balanced budget and a surplus. Highlights below.
 - Balanced budget with a $84 Million surplus and a $1,304 PFD.
 - Largest increase to K-12 education in our history - $175 million allotted for education which represents a $680 increase in the BSA.
 - $7.5 million for child-care block grants that would go towards wages, and more services for child-care.
 - Head-Start - $5 million.
 - Home and Community-based Waiver Services - $7.5 million in undesignated general funds (UGF), and $7.5 million in federal receipts.
 - Department of Corrections - $1 million to assist re-entry housing.
 - Rural Public Radio Grants - $1 million to ensure residents had access to emergency information.
 - $10 million was moved from the capital budget- half went to Statehood Defense and the other half was moved to the Alaska Travel Industry Association's operating budget.

My Bills-

- Senate Bill 22 (Juneteenth) is so close to being law- It is currently in House Finance and will be heard during the next session which begins on January 16th, 2024. The bill will then move to the Rules Committee and the House floor for a vote. The Senate approved the bill 16-4 before the end of the session.
- Senate Bill 23 (Use of Force) is in State Affairs and will be heard again during the next legislative session.
- Senate Bill 24 (Mental Health Education) remains in Senate Finance and will be heard during the next legislative session.
