In Time of Need – A People’s Forum – Anchorage March 7-8, 2003

With the country at Code Orange and close to war with Iraq, it seems timely that the following emergency preparation workshop (designed for natural or human caused disasters) is coming shortly to Anchorage. Expect the series “In Time of Need – A People’s Forum,” speakers and material to be “well-honed” by the time it reaches Anchorage after a journey to Juneau (Jan. 24-25), Fairbanks (Feb. 7-8), and Kenai (Feb. 21-22).

Not to over-emphasize conflict – speakers recognize that earthquake, fire, avalanche, getting lost in the hills, or even frozen pipes are more likely to befall the average Alaskan family. Nevertheless, the lessons of preparedness have broad application!

4th Avenue after the 1964 quake

While Keynote speaker, Dr. Picou associated with the Cordova community following the Exxon Valdez Oil spill, will address some of the social ramifications of disasters, a Friday evening armchair panel (Michael Carey, Roman Dial, Larry Mercurief, & Chris Kiana) will ponder human and traditional resourcefulness. The Saturday program “fires up” with “Scared Scriptless” improvisations before stacking up a rich assortment of film, feature and standing advice on topics including shelter, energy, food and water – emergency planning and how best to protect children during difficult times. The Share Fair connects attendees with an array of agencies and groups who bring wide experience to the table – perhaps offering opportunities for members of the community to find their place in the larger scheme of things.
