WHEREAS, while many places in the United States and across the globe are descending into more and more silencing forms censorship and using censorship tactics (both in offline and online settings), so far in Alaska, for the most part, we have continued to find ways to disagree without resorting to these methods, but instead have used the civil means available to us; such as peaceful protests in public settings, appealing to our representative government to redress our grievances, turning to the courts when those grievances aren't heard; and all the means recognized in our Constitution.

WHEREAS, that despite all of the positive elements present in our community there exists in darker places and within darker motives, threats to our inherent and inalienable rights that are becoming more present in the light.
